LOCAL GOVERNMENT CHRONICLE 08 September 2011

Coping with short-notice care home closures
By Peter Hay, President of the Association of Directors of Adult Social Services (ADASS)

All sorts of issues arise when a care home closes down at short notice – whatever the reason. We at Adass are endorsing a new online guide to support commissioners who may be called upon to manage such closures.

Adass and the Social Care Institute for Excellence want to help minimise the impact on residents, their families and supporters, as well as to support local systems to deal with sudden retraction in the market.

Discussing this work with Julie Jones, chief executive at SCIE and a former council deputy chief executive, we felt that local authority commissioners would welcome some practical tools and guidance to help them if called upon to manage closures at short notice. But we hope the guide will also be of interest to others and encourage better working together locally.

The new website is not pretending to be a fully comprehensive guide to closures. What it does do, however, is to provide a starting point on how to deal with this.

National Audit Office – Personal budgets
15 September 2011

Responding to the National Audit Office (NAO) report on the use of personal budgets, SCIE's Director of Adult Services, David Walden, says:

"SCIE agrees that more needs to be done to provide choice for people. They also need consistent contact with a worker who knows their circumstances. This chimes with the findings of a report that we ourselves published, which looks at the experiences of personal budgets being used by older people, and people with mental health issues. Personal budget-holders also say they need clear information about how to use the funding. And people can be enabled to define their own risks and to recognise, identify and report abuse, neglect and safeguarding issues. However, it's good to hear that most people who have personal budgets in social care are reporting improved wellbeing. The
